SPINAL MUSCULAR ATROPHY

- SMA is the #1 inherited cause of infant death.
- 1 in 6,000 babies born are afflicted with SMA.
- 1 in 35 people carry the gene for SMA and don't even know it.
- SMA destroys the motor neurons of the spinal cord, prohibiting impulses from the brain from reaching otherwise healthy muscles. Due to inactivity, the muscles waste away.
- Those children with Type I SMA often do not live to see their 2nd birthday. If they do, SMA prevents them from crawling, walking, sitting up, swallowing and severely inhibits their breathing.
- Several treatments for SMA are being tested in labs across the country and overseas.
- Scientists are the closest to curing SMA than any other genetic neuromuscular disease. They need additional funding and political awareness to get the job done.
